

NOT-SO-REDICULOUS AMENITY ALERT

Socialist Architect's Luxe Condo Tower Will Donate to Charity

Monday, July 13, 2015, by Sean McCaughan

Architect Thomas Juul-Hansen is paradoxically a proud socialist and a big New York society architect who is designing JMH Development's luxurious boutique Three Hundred Collins condominium in Miami Beach's rarified South-of-Fifth neighborhood. Have his ideals rubbed off on JMH Development? From the latest press release, the building's biggest amenity yet:

JMH Development, New York-based leading developer of Three Hundred Collins, announced today that it is partnering with charity: water, a nonprofit organization bringing clean and safe drinking water to people in developing countries. Through this innovative business model, JMH is donating $20,000 of every sale made at the luxury boutique residential project to two of charity: water's partners, Relief Society of Tigray (REST) in Ethiopia and Splash (formerly A Child's Right) in Nepal. This announcement comes at the heels of the recent earthquake in Nepal, making drinking water even scarcer for millions of Nepalese locals.
